We are Feeding Westchester

Feeding Westchester is the heart of a network that expertly sources and distributes food and resources to feed people who are hungry in every town in Westchester.
If you are like me, food means something special to you. Maybe it's a first memory of being in a kitchen with a parent passing you a plate full of breakfast, or standing in a garden trying your first tomato straight from the vine, or being around a table of happily-gathered family members sharing stories and food in celebration of a holiday. Food is powerful: it gives us the energy to concentrate, work hard, be productive and thrive.

1 in 5 of our neighbors cannot count on food being available. 1 in 5 of our neighbors may begin the day lacking energy to work, concentrate at school or follow a doctor’s dietary instructions. 1 in 5 of our neighbors don’t have the basic nutrition that nourishes them and helps them live their healthiest lives. In the next few pages you will meet a few of our 1 in 5 neighbors and learn how the food we provide helps them eat today, be nourished, and thrive.

Last year, we distributed over 9.3 million pounds of food – up from 8.4 million pounds in the prior year! I’m proud that much of the increase came from the “recovery” of quality, produce that would otherwise go to waste. We thank our food partners for diverting quality, excess food from landfills to the back of our trucks. Thanks to these recovery efforts, we distributed more than 3 million pounds of nutritious fresh produce, like apples, lettuce, carrots, as well as pears, arugula and kale.

In addition to providing the food our neighbors need today, we helped people thrive. Through our nutrition education classes, we helped clients eat healthier. Through our food growing program we helped people learn to sustainably grow food. And, we made more than 500 home visits to help elderly and disabled clients access available food support through SNAP (food stamps).

Our work is carefully guided by a 5 year strategic plan to distribute 10.5 million meals by 2021. We will achieve this by continuing to efficiently source and distribute food, by collaborating closely with our food pantry and soup kitchen partners, and by working with new strategic partners that help us reach more of our 1 in 5 neighbors.

And, last year we changed our name to Feeding Westchester to better reflect our path towards providing clients with food for today, and with other resources to help them live their best lives. And, most simply it better says what we do!

I’m truly grateful to our partners, our friends and our donors. Together we are Feeding Westchester.

With appreciation,

Leslie Gordon

We know that children who don’t get enough nutritious food fall behind in school, growth, and foundational development. Hunger can have lifelong consequences.

That’s why our work is so important. We run several high-impact programs tailored specifically for children who otherwise wouldn’t have enough to eat. One example is our BackPack Program. Each of the 61,175 BackPacks we gave out last year contained easy-to-prepare foods that children can eat at home, when no other food is available.

Meet Paola Tacona, a young Greenburgh resident who once relied on Feeding Westchester for food. When Paola’s family moved to Westchester, her parents found it a struggle to support their children, due to the high cost of living. “My mom often couldn’t afford to go to the grocery store,” Paola recalls. And that meant the family often went without food.

For Paola, help came in the form of our BackPacks.

“When I would get the bag,” Paola says, “it was great because it was a meal coming home. I’m thankful for Feeding Westchester.” Paola would open her BackPack to find ready-to-eat choices like whole-grain cereal and shelf-stable milk. When her parents left early for work, she could make her own breakfasts, fueling a better school day.

But it’s not just through our BackPack program that we are feeding children. Westchester schools are also hosting our Mobile Pantry distributions right on school grounds, sending nutritious produce, proteins and dairy home with families.

Indeed, visit any of our Mobile Pantry or Fresh Market distribution sites, and you’ll see children excited to be helping their parents select food to bring home. Recently, one child’s face lit up with smiles when he saw that there were enough beautiful purple grapes for his family to receive an extra box. He told us that grapes are one of his favorite snacks, and he was excited to share with his siblings.

As for Paola, her family has gotten back on their feet now, but she hasn’t forgotten the experience of not having food. Now, as a volunteer, Paola has helped fill hundreds of BackPacks on which she once relied. “It feels great to give back,” she smiles.

Paola’s in good company. More than 11,000 people volunteered with us last year. Together, they spent nearly 29,000 hours packing food for people in need. They volunteer because, like us, they believe that no child should ever go hungry.

Feeding Westchester provides food to help feed the 60,000 children who are hungry through BackPacks distributed at schools, neighborhood Mobile Pantry and Fresh Market distributions and through our partner network of food pantries. We also teach children of all ages how to grow their own food at 13 co-op and 5 farm sites across Westchester.

Working families face challenges from all directions: low wages, high childcare costs, and even higher rent. It can become impossible to stay ahead of the bills. For families working minimum-wage jobs and juggling expenses, fresh fruits and vegetables are a luxury.

That’s the problem that single mom Dorothy Shelton faces every day. “I’m one of many young people struggling to make ends meet,” she says.

It’s not for a lack of trying. Dorothy works nearly 70 hours a week as a nursing assistant. On top of that, she takes nursing classes. When she finishes her degree, she’ll make more money, but today her job barely pays the bills. And yet her income disqualifies her family from a range of federal programs that would help, like SNAP (food stamps) and free school lunch for her son.

The financial problems started when Dorothy’s son was born six years ago. He was a premature baby who needed extensive care, with many hospital stays before the age of two. Today Dorothy still has medical bills to pay off, and they cut deeply into her grocery budget. That’s where we come in.

“Feeding Westchester,” Dorothy says, “has helped me keep afloat.” Thanks to programs like our Mobile Pantry and Fresh Market that bring fresh produce, proteins and dairy directly to clients, Dorothy can provide her growing son with essential wholesome foods. And when they both get enough to eat, they’re set up for success: she can focus on her nursing studies and help him to excel at school too.

We provide almost 650,000 meals, on average, to people across Westchester like Dorothy, each month. As Dorothy says, “everyone’s struggles look different.” Indeed, there are many reasons that families need Feeding Westchester’s assistance - be it illness, accidents or seasonal work. But regardless of the diverse needs of the people we serve, Feeding Westchester brings stability to their lives.

Food is essential to helping people get back on their feet. Research shows that a predictable, nutritious source of food enhances a person’s productivity at work, in school and at home. And when families need assistance getting enough to eat, we’re there for them – with your help.

For many seniors, costs are climbing. Even after decades of hard work, their savings are slim. At the same time, their health often worsens. And, doctors urge foods they can’t afford.

Mary Turchioe is one of many Westchester seniors in these shoes. Because her body cannot process carbohydrates, her doctor has urged her to adhere to a specialized diet.

“I like healthy food,” Mary explains. “Especially with my strict diet due to my illness. But it’s not always easy to buy those foods.”

Sadly, Mary is like many of the seniors we serve. Women have the highest rates of poverty in old age, and often can’t afford the foods that their doctors recommend. On her budget, fresh produce and lean protein are often literally off the table.

Feeding Westchester puts healthy foods within Mary’s reach. We provide fresh options to vulnerable seniors through a range of programs. Partner food pantries and soup kitchens offer fresh produce and other nutritious choices. Our direct-to-client distributions bring high-quality foods, like fresh fruits and vegetables, to their neighborhoods. We help people like Mary enroll in SNAP (formerly food stamps). While Mary gets fresh food from Feeding Westchester, her SNAP benefits let her purchase other grocery store basics and shelf-stable food items.

Throughout Westchester, our SNAP Coordinator helps seniors and people with disabilities enroll in this national program to provide monthly funds for buying groceries - just one of the ways that Feeding Westchester unlocks resources to support neighbors in need.

Mary’s making the most of what we give her. To learn new ways to use her fresh produce from Feeding Westchester’s Senior Grocery program, she attended our “Just Say Yes to Fruits and Vegetables” workshop at her senior center. She can’t wait to make “5 Minute Brussels Sprouts” and “Apple and Fig Salad.” People like Mary are the reason we have a Registered Dietitian on staff to teach nutrition classes especially for seniors, guiding them in adding fresh produce to their diets and adapting recipes for better health.

We believe that no one should have to choose between food and medicine. With our help, seniors like Mary are following their doctors’ orders to eat their way to better health.
AN EVENING IN GOOD TASTE
25 renowned chefs created an unforgettable experience for over 500 supporters while raising money for Feeding Westchester.

SPRING GALA
This elegant dinner brought 430 guests together to celebrate our 30th year of Feeding Westchester and honor longtime Board Member, Rick Rakow.

MILES FOR MEALS
An Annual Hunger Action Month 5K Walk and Run at Pace University. Participants of all skill levels “paced” themselves on the course to help raise awareness and funds to fight hunger.

GOLDEN SCOOP
19 corporate teams competed to pack food in our largest competition yet! Competitors proved their commitment to fighting hunger and packed over 44,312 meals! The winner, Danone North America, was awarded the coveted Golden Scoop Competition Trophy!

COMMUNITY SCOOP-A-THON
10 teams made up of families, community groups and sports teams, gathered for our first annual food packing competition on Giving Tuesday. In 45 minutes, teams packed nearly 20,000 pounds of fresh apples into bags that were later distributed to local soup kitchens and food pantries.

HUNGER HEROES AWARDS BREAKFAST
We recognized the important work and support of five partnering organizations – D’Arrigo Bros. Co. of New York, The Arc Westchester, MasterCard, Junior League of Bronxville, and Danone North America – at our signature awards breakfast. Over 200 supporters attended.
